

Mr Booger Goes to the Woods

Erwin Brunsveld

Mr Booger wakes up. The sun is shining. "I'd like to go to the woods", says Mr Booger. It will be fun!

A walk. That's what he'll do!

Hmm.... long, a bit longer or even longer? Mr Booger chooses the long walk, so he must follow the blue posts.

There's the first pole already... and just a bit further is the second pole.

This is fun. It's like being on a treasure hunt!

What's that? A whole procession of ants, and they're all carrying something. "What are you doing?" asks Mr Booger.

"We're tidying up the woods a bit", the ants say in unison.

"Oh, that's good!", says Mr Booger.

"There's quite a lot of rubbish lying around. I'll help you!"

Hey, that's funny. There's an egg. What's an egg doing on the ground? "It blew out of my nest, explains Mrs Bird.

Mr Booger helps Mrs Bird put the egg back in the nest.

Mr Owl is sitting on the next blue post.

“Hello, Mr Owl. Is it very far?” Mr Booger asks him.

“No, you’re nearly there now”, answers Mr Owl.

“OW! What’s that? An acorn?”. Mr Booger rubs his head and looks upwards.

A squirrel bursts out laughing and almost falls off a branch.

Mr Booger hurries on.

What has walked here? Is that a deer's footprint? Perhaps it's still around here somewhere.

Where's the next blue post? Has Mr Booger got lost?

He sees a hollow. "Yoo-hoo, is anyone there?"

Mrs Rabbit appears. "You must go that way, Mr Booger. You're almost there."

Good. There's the last blue post. It was a lovely walk!

Bye-bye, woods. Bye-bye, animals.

See you again!
